Within the new boutique Bermondsey Square Hotel, this restaurant should go down a treat with fashionably boho locals. The food is homely stuff like Denhay ham & eggs with mustard mayo, cottage pie with roasted carrots & Bakewell tart – with many ingredients sourced from nearby Borough Market. You can even make a night of it by tucking into cocktails & sleeping over in one of the 79 designer bedrooms, before breakfasting the next morning. Full review coming soon.

Alfie's Kitchen, Bermondsey

There's nothing like a smart new boutique hotel to show that an area has gone up in the world. And Bermondsey Square Hotel has plenty going for it, not least its new restaurant, Alfie's Kitchen. With many ingredients sourced from nearby Borough Market, the food is homely Brit fare: think cottage pie with roasted carrots, followed by Bakewell tart with cream. It ought to suit the neighbourhood's fashionably boho crowd down to the ground.
